Marty Brigham has focused his career on product safety and earned a national reputation in representing victims of propane fires. This year, he was lead counsel for a husband and wife whose propane tank had been overfilled, causing the tank to release propane when warmed by the Jersey shore sun. The husband was enveloped in a ball of fire and the wife was buried in the debris of their demolished home. The propane seller had cut corners and failed to use a scale to make sure the tank wasn't overfilled.
